THE MIRROR '55

I am in the bubbling brook
And in the towering tree;
I am in a poetry book
And in the roaring sea.

I am privileged to say
And do what I think best
To work, and, when I'm tired,
To stop and take a rest.

I am in the free
The liberty to w
To speak, to lov
To walk in to th

to worship, and night.

I am there in all things good,
And in all men who pray;
I am here with you right now
On Graduation Day.

I am beauty, and I'm close
To you with all my powers;
I am everywhere you look
In this great land of ours.

Dedication

Miss Grace L. Woodward

To Miss Grace L. Woodward, who retired in June, 1954, after twenty-seven years as Head of the Business Department, the Class of 1955 dedicates this yearbook. As teacher, counselor, and friend to many hundreds of pupils during her thirty-six years of teaching in Waltham, she will be remembered for her high ideals, her wise guidance, and for the sound standards that she established for students and teachers in her field of work. Always ready to listen to problems of pupils, parents, and teachers, Miss Woodward gave unstintingly to others the benefit of her long experience. She was unselfish in the expenditure of her time and strength in the profession to which she was dedicated.

Countless pupils have been placed in good positions through Miss Woodward's work as Director of Placement, and many successful business men and women owe their start to her good offices. Her deep concern for the correlation of school and community was shown by her interest in city-wide projects and by the cordial relationship that was developed by her and her department with the business leaders of Waltham. She was widely recognized as a leading business educator.

We learned with regret that Miss Woodward was to retire although we knew that the contemplated rest was well deserved. She has carried with her the respect and affection of her co-workers and of the pupils who came under her influence. We wish for her many years of good health, peace of mind, and happiness.

IN MEMORIAM

This final tribute to Harold L. Pride cannot adequately express the true sentiment of all those who came to know and respect him. His sudden death on December 6, 1954, terminated twenty-eight years of faithful and devoted service as Director of Vocational Education in Waltham.

He was a kindly gentleman . . . as a teacher, efficient and fair . . . as a leader, conscientious and able. The quiet, unassuming manner, characteristic of Harold L. Pride, will always be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to have served under him.

The earnest guidance and wise counsel he gave contributed immeasurably to the success earned by many of the Trade School graduates. His ideals perpetuated the basic standards for creating skilled craftsmen.

He worked diligently and zealously to serve the youth he loved so much and to better Vocational Education. He labored untiringly for the improvement of the existing building inadequacies and hoped for a new Trade School in the near future. May the modern structure he envisioned become a reality . . . to serve as a living memorial to Harold L. Pride.

It seems appropriate to close this farewell tribute with the quotation that inspired him greatly . . .

"He who hath a trade, hath an estate."

J SAVAGE

Class Will

We, the Class of 1955, being of sound mind and in full possession of our faculties, declare and assert this document to be our last will and testament. After payment of our just debts and obligations, we do hereby bequeath and distribute our meager estate as follows:

To Mr. Sheehy, our congenial and understanding headmaster, we present an electronic brain detector for apprehending seniors who leave school without books.

For Mr. May we leave a ream of extra-long composition paper for bigger and better session lists.

To Miss Flagg we extend our sincere appreciation for her interest in our welfare, both present and future.

Mrs. Windsor is bequeathed several cartons of huge alarm clocks equipped with supersonic sound for tardy pupils with the hope that they will arrive promptly at 8:00 on those fateful five mornings.

To Mr. Ryan, our good-natured history teacher who is always interested in a new taste treat, we leave a chocolate covered hard boiled egg on a stick.

Miss Mooney, our patient shorthand teacher, is left with an enlarged, group picture of the friendly, smiling faces in room 109 to keep on her desk always.

Mr. Dwyer receives a leather-bound photograph album of his great productions including State Fair and the 1955 Senior Play, The 13th Chair.

Miss Nolan, the business advisor, is given a 52 weeks' supply of tickets to the program Twenty Questions.

To Miss Hogarty and Miss Madden we present a squad of peppy, obedient cheerleaders who will attend every practice faithfully.

For Miss Eaton we have written an essay, "The Art of Speaking English with a French Accent."

Mr. Morang is willed a formula on Psychology in the Classroom, or How To Teach Chemistry and Maintain One's Sanity.

To Mrs. Carney we leave an "oscar" for her help which made the Christmas Program such a success.

Mr. Yetten receives an unbreakable yardstick, which we trust will be most appreciated.

For Miss Darmedy we are installing a soundproof room so that she may teach history in an atmosphere of absolute peace and quiet during classes with those "restless" students.

To Mr. Hood we bequeath a supersonic word finder to aid him in his favorie game—scrabble.

Miss McGrath is given a pair of snowshoes so that she can find her way back to W.H.S. from Natick, should she ever lose her way during a blizzard.

For Mr. Avery we have secured a top-flight group of projectionists to further the Visual Education Program.

To Miss Bliss and Miss Babb we leave a book of treasured recipes and ideas including such favorites as "How to Get the Most Out of the Least."

Mr. Husson, our genial bookkeeping teacher, is given a gold desk plaque inscribed Mr. Debits and Credits.

For Mr. Perkins we have engaged a robot that will take his place in the student driver car when those up and coming drivers prove too much for his frayed nerves.

Mr. Smyth receives several boxes of assorted vitamins to fortify him for next year's masterpiece, the 1956 Mirror.

Mr. Eames is given a book entitled How to Solve Algebra Problems in an Hour, written by his most talented students.

To Mrs. Gabriel we present a handy portable frame with which to exhibit the best art from W.H.S.

For Mr. MacArthur we have secured a contract with the Boston Celtics and hope that he will remember that he got his start at W.H.S. during the Student-Faculty game.

To Miss Gearan we leave a scroll citing her for her help with the National Honor Society.

To aid Mrs. Flynn, our teacher-librarian, we have appointed a special messenger to deliver the daily newspapers by 8:05 so that she may get the news while it is news.

To the Juniors we leave the lofty position of dictatorship of the school, along with the brains and brawn of the Class of '55 to use as they see fit.

The Sophomores are given a pamphlet on the "Ways and Means of Incoming Freshmen" which we trust needs no further explanation.

For the Freshmen we reserve a special wing of the building (representing a playpen) where they may be safe from the upperclassmen.

As Co-Executors of this will and testament we appoint Miss Tahaney, Miss Leary, Mr. White, and Mr. Curry.

In view of the fact that the Class of 1955 spent one year under the supervision of our beloved and departed headmaster, Mr. Richard S. Huff, we would like to present an actual gift in the form of a check to the Huff Memorial Fund in honor of his memory.

In Witness Whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal this seventh day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and fifty-five.

Jean Lazaro

1955 Class Prophecy

"Flight 11 leaving La Guardia in ten minutes!" Hurriedly, my secretary, Marge Leone, and I followed the porter, John Mahoney, who was carrying our exclusive Bertha Kenneson luggage across the ramp to our waiting plane. As we boarded the giant Stratocruiser, I presented my passport to the stewardess, Jean Lazaro.

Once seated, I began to think of my exciting assignment for my editor, Dorothy Ware. The ALBANESE WORLD TRAVELER would print my series of articles and pictures on famous world locales. I decided to get my Grover Typewriter and start my first article, but I was too thrilled to settle down to work.

Our hostess, Barbara Lanctot, brought us some Lively Gum and invited us to adjourn to the lounge downstairs to watch the KEZER COMEDY REVUE emceed by that fast-rising, versatile comedian, Don Vautour. As I entered the room, I recognized the "TV fix-it man of the year" Bill Nordstrom adjusting the Morreale Airline TV. I took the only empty seat in the room and found myself sitting beside Cliff Straw, who was the United States Ambassador to Norway. We settled back to enjoy the show, and after a few jokes, Don introduced that accomplished singer, pianist, accordionist, dancer, and poet, Sylvana Vitti. Next in line among the performers were the interpretive modern ballet dancers, Joan Duddy and Patty Zeolla.

Just this moment the pilot, Tommy McGovern, who had left his co-pilot, Bob Graves, in charge, came back to tell us that we would soon be stopping at Reykjavik, Iceland, to refuel. Upon landing at field, the mechanic, Dave Eagle, discovered that ice had formed on the wings and that we would be delayed for some time. While waiting for the necessary repairs to be made, Margie and I decided to take a tour. Walking along what seemed to be the main street, we came upon an adorable little Gift Shop in the shape of an igloo. Its unexpected presence aroused our female curiosity, and we eagerly entered the igloo. Once inside, we immediately became absorbed in the lovely variety of gifts and notions. We didn't notice the quiet approach of the proprietress until we heard her pleasant, "May I help you?" That soft and appealing voice could belong to only one person—Judy Bomengen!

She mentioned that the U.S.O. performers from the States were giving a show for the servicemen at the nearby base. Our arms laden with gifts we left the shop in search of Marine quarters.

On the way we met another former classmate, Joan McGovern, who, we discovered, was now in the Marine Nurses Corps and stationed here. She invited us to attend the U.S.O. show with her, and on the way we reminisced about the many happy times we had had at W.H.S. Joan told us that a number of nurses had just returned from duty in Thule, Greenland, and would now be under her supervision. Among them were Jane Gordon, Carol Borden, and Judy Putnam. She also told us that all the boys who had entered the service together had, by some strange coincidence, been stationed here all working as construction engineers. They were Joe Costa, Charlie Czedik, Charlie McLaughlin, Dick Partridge, Ronnie Pari, Don MacLean, Bob Comeau, and Leo Bilodeau. After the show, we bade hurried goodbyes to Joan and all our other friends, and hastened to our awaiting Stratocruiser, which was to take us to our next stop—London!

We were in the air for about two hours before landing at the Croyden Airdrome just outside the city. As our schedule called for a week-end stay in England, we hailed a cab and proceeded to the HAPGOOD MANOR. At the hotel we changed into street clothes, and being women we yielded to our feminine impulse to go window shopping. Naturally we couldn't walk to the shopping district, so we did the only sensible thing that any women would do with a lot of money that wasn't theirs—we decided to use some of our expense money to rent a car for the week-end. After we had found the address of our nearest auto-rental in the City of London directory, we dashed down to the garage with natural eagerness of all tourists. We discovered the proprietor to be Richard Cooper. He recommended the lower-priced cars, figuring we were traveling on a restricted budget, but we chose the most elegant and most expensive of all sport cars he had to offer—a lavender Jaguar with deep purple velvet seat covers. We also learned from Dick that Bill Delorey, Ken Parker, and Jack Levey were all working for him as auto mechanics.

We drove majestically off in the direction of the London Bridge and startled staid Londoners who were strolling around Picadilly Circus.

We parked the car, and giving it a loving pat we wandered off down Bond Street. In passing we gazed covetously at the furs and beautiful gowns that Dickens and Jones and the Liberty Shop had to offer.

Across the street we noticed an unusual but strangely familiar sign. The name, Lillibridge, caught our eye. Unconsciously, we quickened our step toward the fur salon. Once inside, we met Judy Lillibridge, and after a moment of "hellos and how are yous?" she showed us around the shoppe. We didn't pay much attention to the models until we heard familiar laughter and excited voices calling our names. This seemed to be our day for meeting old school friends. Sheila Duffy, Barbs Schoener, Sheila Wallace, and Jeanne Vincuilla came rushing from the dressing room and gaily danced about us, just bombarding us with questions about home: "Had Waltham High changed since we had all left there? Had we seen this person or that one lately?" The girls told us that they knew of another classmate in London who owned a tea shoppe, but they kept the name of the owner as a surprise. The seven of us must have made a delightful spectacle as we walked and talked our way toward the shoppe of our mysterious friend. For some reason the way seemed familiar, but Marge and I took little note of our surroundings until we heard Jeanne exclaim, "Will you look at this 'Crazy Otto?' I'll bet this car belongs to some VIP's. Let's see if they are in the tea shoppe!" Marge and I looked at the lavender Jaguar, smiled knowingly at each other, and said nothing but followed our friends into the little lunch room, which was, to our surprise directly facing our car.

As we entered we heard a lilting voice singing, "It's Townsend Tea Time." Marion came dashing forth to greet us. The time flew quickly as we exchanged bits of information about the whereabouts of our former classmates. From our conversation we learned that Marie Williams is now on tour with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Arlene Tierney is a secretary to Louis Putney, who is now the owner of a chain of super markets; Carole Quagliozzi Ann Bailey, Barb Favre, Rita Halloran, Georgette Curtis, JoAnn Famosi, and Norma LaForte are all working for the government in Washington, D. C.; Joe Scalia is studying for his doctorate at Oxford; Ann Christiansen is teaching at the Fanny Farmer's School of Cooking; and Marjorie Ash is a leader in elementary education in Tallahassee. We told them that Dudley Farrell had founded a hospital in Lansing, Michigan, and that Angelo Taranto is head coach of the Los Angeles Rams.

Suddenly realizing how late it was getitng, we decided that we better leave before all the stores closed. In parting we commented on the attractive styling of the room; Whereupon, Marion told us that Beverly Fulton, the noted interior decorator, had designed it for her on a recent London tour. Marion accompanied us to the door, and while the others were still saying farewell, Marge and I quietly walked to the lavender car, started the motor, and waved goodbye to our astonished friends.

Early Saturday morning we went to the airport to meet George Sangeleer, who had been assigned as our photographer. The remainder of the week-end we spent photographing famous landmarks in and around London.

The next leg of our journey took us to LeBourget Field in Paris, France. As we were going to be in Paris for only a day, we planned to visit the most renowned land mark for tourists in that lovely city, the Eiffel Tower. Gratefully, we got into the nearest cab and relaxed our weary bones. The driver turned around to ask us our destination, and to our surprise, it was Sawyer Sawin! We asked him about hotels, and he recommended us to the fashionable Continental where the elite stay. Sawyer stopped in front of the hotel where a red headed doorman in a bright red suit greeted us in grand old New England style. It was none other than Billy Meade.

This was only the beginning. Bill ushered us inside to the desk where a second surprise awaited us, for there stood Bob Milligan in the gaudy garb of a hotel clerk. This started off the chain reaction. Bob rang the bellboy bell. You guessed it! Bill Medeiros appeared to take us bag and baggage to our eleventh floor suite. Inside the elevator we got another jolt. The operator, who looked as if he had his share of ups and downs that day, was Bob McLeod. During our brief stay in the elevator, Bob told us that he had always expected to go places but never to such heights. Bill led us down the corridor and opened to door to our rooms. We thanked him for his kindness and then tipped him. Picking himself up off the floor, he hurried away in a state of confusion. We proceeded gaily into the room where our room overseer was doing last minute cleaning. You're right—it was Ann Powers.

Since our schedule was so crammed, we left immediately for the Eiffel Tower. At the entrance to the tower we ran into Norma Doucette, Carol Phelan, Roberta Pittman, and Carol Chase, who were, they told us, traveling saleswomen for V. CANNISTRARO, INC., manufacturers of the last word in typing, a pocket typewriter. At this point we whipped out our Dion Dizzy Pills, swallowed eleven apiece, and braced ourselves for the long trudge up the spiral staircase. Halfway up two women almost knocked us down in their great hurry to reach the bottom. After the initial shock, we took a second look and found them to be Suzie Gangi and Barbara Greaves, who told us they were assistant secretaries to the assistant secretary, Carol Freeley, of the Pecce Associates, in charge of Unimportant Details. At the summit of the tower the radioman, Bob Mailly, allowed us to transmit our messages and hellos to our friends in the United States. After our sojourn in Paris we flew to Germany, taking the airlift into Berlin. As our visa was good for only one day, we didn't have very much time to spare. While George snapped a few pictures of the airport, Marge and I hailed a bus to take us to the center.

Since we had heard so much about the famed Brandenburg Gate, that was one of our very first stops. We got as close as we could to the barrier and peeked breathlessly over at the notorious landmark. We stood there for about eleven minutes and thought of the thousands of people who had passed under this arch.

On our way to the Schiller Theatre, we spied one of Berlin's well known sidewalk cafes, the Unter der Linden. Naturally, we had to have our lunch here, and selecting a table we sat down and picked up the menu. However, it was printed entirely in German, so we looked for someone to translate it for us. Just then our waitress appeared and graciously asked us if we were ready to order. As we started to explain our predicament, the girl exclaimed, "Why, aren't you Bonnie Smith and Marge Leone from Waltham High School back in the good old U.S.A.?"

"Joan Savage, we squealed after taking a closer look, isn't it a small world!" After Joan explained to us what the menu was all about we enjoyed a light snack and relaxed to wait for Peter Diepold's chauffeur to pick up up.

While planning this trip, my secretary had written to Peter in Brake, Germany, telling him of our impending visit. He had very cordially invited us to be his guests.

His chauffeur, Bill Marshall, arrived just then and speedily transported us in a shiny new lowslung Mercedes sportscar to Peter's pretentious estate on the Weser River. After we were comfortably seated in the luxurious standing room, Peter told us that he is now a professor of music in Munich, Germany, and that Dianne Coolkasian, who had been one of Waltham High's outstanding pianists, was studying at the conservatory under him and would soon go on an extended tour of Europe as the feature performer in a group of famous musicians.

As soon as we had finished an eleven course dinner, Peter invited us to take a short cruise up the river to Bremen in his Yacht—the Waltham Hi! He also mentioned that it had been designed exclusively for him by that famous inner and outer world manufacturer of boats, airplanes, buses, motorcycles, submarines, hot rods, and kiddie kars—Roy Herring.

Upon returning from our delightful sail we thanked Peter for his warm hospitality. Peter's Valet, Al Lee, placed our baggage in the trunk of the Mercedes, and William drove us to the depot.

We climbed aboard the "Ko Ko Mo Choo Choo" and proceeded to the eleventh car, which was filled with bustling activity. As we approached a nearby hostess to ascertain the cause of the commotion, she turned to answer us, and lo and behold, it was Sheila Porter! She explained that this was local No. 111 of the B.S.M.B.-C.L.C.N.N.O.P.C. from the United States. This is too long to explain. They were on a goodwill tour to Switzerland, which was also our destination. Observing the questioning look on our faces, Sheila enlightened us that the officers were Helen Rivers, president; Angelina Benninati, vice president; Elaine O'Neill, secretary; Mary Lou Horan, treasurer; and Helen Reardon, chairwoman of the tour. Among the gathering we recognized only two more classmates, Rosemarie Graceffa and Edythe Deffeley.

We decided to turn in early, as we knew the following day would be chock full of more exciting adventures. At eleven the next morning our train pulled into Geneva station. At the information center we met Betty Crowe, who was a correspondent for the ALBANESE WORLD TRAVELER. She was returning to the main office, so we entrusted her with the reports we had completed thus far. We checked our bags at the lockers and left in search of a bicycle rental.

We were in luck, for around the first corner, we saw an imposing sign, which read, "White's Wheels." In the window this sign caught our attention—"Take a bike. Go for a hike. We supply the costume." That witty bit could belong to only one person, Joanne White. Once inside the shop we yodeled for Joanne, who came bounding through the doorway to greet us. We told Joanne our plans for the day, and she agreed to leave her assistant, Frances Scalia, in charge of the shop and accompany us on our ski trip.

We rode our bikes as far as the tramway and took the chairlift up one of the mountains of the Juro Range. At the tippety-top we rented skis and signed up for the free ski lessons that were being given that day. To our surprise our instructor was the celebrated ski jump artist, Ida May Gilbert. After our preliminary lessons we spent the rest of the afternoon frolicking about the snow-covered slopes.

That evening we returned to the ski lodge for steaming hot chocolate and Swiss cheese crackers. Over the fireplace we saw a portrait that seemed to ring a bell in our minds. Upon closer examination we found it to be that of the fabulous philanthropist, Mary Hayes, who had dedicated the resort to ski enthusiasts throughout the world.

We hated to leave, but the time alloted for this assignment was fast waning. Leaving our bikes to be picked up the next morning, we hopped a toboggan, which was expertly guided by that cold-rod speedster of the snow, Muriel Gallinaro.

At the station we redeemed our luggage and signalled to a waiting taxi. The driver, Leonard Quental, drove us speedily to the airport. We arrived there not a minute too soon, for Flight 26 was just about to take off. We ran up the ramp and breathlessly showed our passports to the bewildered stewardess, Carol Hamilton.

As we sat down, we both noticed the models of perfection, Carol Janson and Barbara Curran. They excitedly informed us that they too were headed for Rome where they were to model Nancy McAdam's latest creations in the Fashion Review of the World.

While still in the clouds over our many experiences, we learned from the girls that Elizabeth McLellan, their agent, would meet them at the airport. They also told us that they would introduce to the world the revolutionary step in footwear. These unique shoes, the biggest thing since CAPIZIO'S, were created by Mary Gavolio. Their name?—Gavolio's.

At the airport coffee shop operated by Richard Gullotti we met the roaming reporter, Frances Salamone, who had just completed a World Press article on those two specially known astronomers, John Gracey and Eddie Larkin. They had just discovered a new star, the Graceylark. Nancy Cappadona, Jean Daniels, Carolyn Nelson, and Sheila Conroy were in Rome filming commercials for that supersonic new toothpaste, "I'll Never Smile Again," which not only removes food and stains but also the teeth and gums. It was a sure cure for toothaches and gum boils.

Laughingly we left the shop and commenced our Italian itinerary by visiting the ancient ruins of the Forum, the Coliseum, and the Sasillica Julia.

Emerging from the ruins, we hired a modern charioteer, who was none other than Bill Sinclair, to take us for a drive to the famous Fountain of Trevi. It was a fairly long ride, and we stopped for pizza on the Appian Way.

Later, when we reached Trevi, we tossed "Three Coins In The Fountain," for the good fortune and happiness of all our former classmates.

Continuing our tour, we turned down the Via Condotti, and stopped at the shop of the famed leather worker, Antimori, to buy souvenirs and gifts for ourselves and our friends back in America. To our surprise we discovered Paul Schofield apprenticing under the skilled supervision of Signor Antimori himself.

We couldn't miss traveling to Pisa to view the famed leaning Tower. Upon arriving there, we made the most startling discovery of all. The Tower was straight!!! A sign outside the entrance proudly announced to the world that this stupendous feat had been accomplished by none other than our "Tarzan of W.H.S., Angelo Mosca."

We spent the rest of the afternoon combing the shops and market places in search of various souvenirs.

That evening, we left by train for Naples, Italy, where we would embark on the last leg of our world expedition. Our reservations were on the newest and most modern of all ocean liners, the S.S. NEPTUNIA, which would take us to New York Harbor and America again!

While waiting for the ship we noticed a sign "Neville & Benoit—Professional Swimming Instructors." Since the names struck a familiar chord in our minds, we decided to inquire about them. Their assistant told us that Marty and Connie were once again attempting to swim the Atlantic Ocean and wouldn't return for a month. Disappointed that we could not see our two school alumnae, we departed after leaving a hurried note.

After having our bags checked through customs, we went in search of our stateroom. In the early part of the afternoon we took a short tour of our liner. Leaning on the guide rail and gazing into the clear blue Mediterranean waters, Marge and I reminisced about our captivating adventures in the various countries of the playground of the world. As the sun started dipping below the horizon, it etched the Rock of Gibraltar against the sky. Drawing nearer we noticed a long figure seated at an easel on top of the Rock painting. The thought struck us simultaneously that this must be Cal Lazaro, who usually spent her summers in Europe sketching the beautiful scenery.

As our ship disappeared into the crimson sunset, only the pleasant and unforgettable memories of our trip remained.

Class History

On September 3, 1952, we, the Class of 1955, stepped through the portals of Waltham High School for the first time and thus began our high school career. After becoming accustomed to new surroundings and strange faces, we participated in our first election at Waltham High by voting for homeroom legislators. Those chosen were Alphonse Vitale, Charles Czedik, Richard Kezer, Richard Morreale, Ernest Richardson, Jane Volpe, Joseph Scalia, James Moran, and Rosemarie Graceffa.

Autumn was the appropriate theme for the Sophomore Get-Acquainted Dance, held on September 19, where we met those who were to remain with us throughout high school years.

The Sophomore Class was well represented on the football team in 1952. On the field were Angelo Mosca, Jack Levey, Dick Morreale, Tom Girolamo, Dick Kezer, Mike Carme, Lenny Scafidi and Bill Pittman, all of whom were instrumental in helping us attain six victories.

For the first time the Sophomore Class had its own Dramatic Club, which met on Tuesdays, seventh period. Sheila Duffy was the only Sophomore chosen to take part in the fall production of the Dramatics Club, CURTAIN GOING UP, presented on November 13 under the direction of Mr. Richard Dwyer.

Chosen to represent the Sophomore Class as hockey cheerleaders were Edna Bengston and Virginia Danglemayer, who later became co-captains of this squad.

In December the following class officers were elected: President, Richard Kezer; Vice President, Richard Morreale; Secretary, Mary Cocivera; and Treasurer, Jean Lazaro.

January brought the Mardi Gras co-sponsored by the Art and Camera Clubs and under the auspices of the Dramatics Club. As we traveled to faraway places, Peter Smith and Barbara Curran were selected as king and queen.

Our basketball team had a successful season with sophomore Tom Girolamo tied for top honors. We were very proud of our hockey team which entered the Bay State League playoffs.

THE ROYAL VAGABOND, an operetta presented under the direction of Mr. Richard Dwyer and Mr. Raymond Crawford, was an overwhelming success.

On March 20, 1953, the Sophomore Hop, biggest social event of our sophomore year, was held. The members of our class enjoyed themselves tremendously.

On June 3, when the seniors graduated, the realization dawned upon us that we were juniors.

During the summer a tragic accident took the lives of our headmaster and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Huff. Mr. Francis Sheehy, our able master, assumed the responsibilities of headmaster.

Upon returning to school on September 9, 1953, we found many new faces among the faculty, as well as a freshman class for the first time in many years. Once again we chose Richard Kezer as President. His capable assistants were: Richard Morreale, Vice President; Joan McGovern, Secretary; and Dorothy Ware, Treasurer.

The highlight of the 1953 football season was the heartbreaking game at Newton. Undefeated the entire season, we lost this thriller by a single point. Supporting the team were the following junior cheerleaders: Kay Bonney, who later served as captain, Dorothy Ware, Betty Crowe, Bonnie Smith, Barbara Hoggan, and Barbara Schoener.

Our basketball team, comprised entirely of juniors, won eleven games and lost only seven. The most memorable contest of the hockey campaign was the tie with favored Walpole. Goalie Ralph Wheeldon was the defensive star of the encounter. As the team finished fourth in the Bay State League, it entered the playoffs. New additions to the hockey cheerleaders were: Joan McGovern, Jean Rogerson, Carol Borden, Bertha Kenneson, Margaret Brown, and Jean Lazaro.

TOO YOUNG, TOO OLD, the Dramatics Club play starring Martha Benoit, was staged on November 19 in Hovey Memorial with Mr. Dwyer once again our capable and energetic coach.

Carol Janson, Dudley Farrell, Nancy Cappadona, and Joe Scalia participated in the revision of the Waltham High School Handbook, which is passed out to all sophomores upon their entrance into high school.

During this school year a good citizenship award was presented to the High School by the Massachusetts State Department of Education for the organization of the Huff Memorial Scholarship Fund. Various major awards received by members of the Junior Class in 1953-1954 were as follows: Kingsbury Temperance Essay prizes, Charles McLaughlin and Mary Geise; Teaching Essay, first prize, Mary Cocivera; Harvard Book Award, presented to the junior boy with the best scholastic record, Edward Larkin. The faculty selected Margaret Walls to attend Girls' State in Bridgewater, while Henry Stewart represented the boys at Boys' State in Amherst.

Class History

We were very proud of the fifteen members of the Junior Class who were inducted into the National Honor Society in May of 1954.

On the memorable evening of May 21, 1954, the Junior Prom, final social event of the year, was held. Tom McGovern and his committee worked diligently to transform the gym into scenes of the Cypress Gardens.

After the excitement of our prom subsided, we elected those who were to lead us through our f'nal year at Waltham High. Richard Kezer became President for the third consecutive time. Georgette Curtis, Mary Hayes and Jean Lazaro were chosen to serve in the capacities of Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer respectively. Immediately following this, the Student Council elections were conducted. Victorious were: John Gracey, President; Dick Morreale, Boys' Vice President; Dorothy Ware, Girls' Vice President; and Carole Lazaro, Secretary-Treasurer.

As our junior year drew to a close, Connie Neville was appointed Editor-in-Chief of our newspaper column, This Week at Waltham High, while Joan McGovern and Jane Volpe were selected to be Co-Editors-in-Chief of the Mirror.

Poised and confident, seniors at last, we returned for our final year on September 3, 1954. After scurrying here and there renewing old acquaintances, we resumed our studies and activities.

November brought the Dramatics Club play State Fair. We found many members of the Senior Class at the fair.

Led by Captains Mark Brown, Tom Girolamo, and Angelo Mosca, we welcomed our new football coach, Mr. Joseph Zeno, a Waltham High 1937 graduate. Climaxing our season, Angelo Mosca was awarded a berth on the Schoolboy All-American football team. Our hockey team, which once again entered the Bay State League play-offs, gained an upset win over undefeated Needham in the first play-off game, 1-0. Senior Stan Krol scored the single goal which gave us our most cherished hockey victory in many years. The Waltham High and Waltham Trade teams combined forces and collaborated in attaining a fairly successful basketball season with Hal Kelley starring in a great comeback achievement as we overcame Newton 70-61 at the Brandeis Gym.

The outstanding basketball game of the year, however, could not have taken place in any league. January 25, 1955, was the date of the unforgettable Student-Faculty game. Mr. White and Mr. Mac Arthur captained the faculty team. Other members of this aggregation, which, with the aid of the referees, succeeded in defeating the students, were Mr. Alfke, Mr. Husson, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Zeno, and everyone's favorite, Mr. Ray Yetten.

The students and faculty elected Mary Senior as the D.A.R. representative from Waltham High.

Queen Barbara Curran reigned at the March of Dimes Ball held at Nuttings on February 2, 1955, while Barbara Schoener, Carol Jansen, and Sheila Wallace were chosen by the seniors to represent Waltham High in the Queen of Hearts contest. Barbara emerged as the winner and is now reigning over our fair city as Queen of Hearts.

On the evening of February 18 the eagerly awaited Senior Dance was held. Chairman Joseph Scalia and his hard-working committee transported us over the rainbow into a world where blue skies prevailed.

Following the spring vacation, The Thirteenth Chair, by Bayard Veille, our Senior Play, presented on April 28, was enjoyed by an attentive audience.

The seniors elected Bonnie Smith, Class Day Queen and also Class Prophet. Her prophecy committee consisted of Constance Neville, Martha Benoit, and Carole Lazaro. Sylvana Vitti wrote our Class Poem; Jean Lazaro prepared the 1955 Class Will.

Now we are about to leave Waltham High School, where a tireless and devoted faculty has guided our footsteps for the past three years. As we face the future let us never forget what they individually and collectively have taught us, for it will certainly serve as a basis for our achievements in the days to come as we take our places as citizens in our beloved country.

COACH ZENO'S MESSAGE

All in all we had a fairly successful season. It was a pleasure for me to return to the school that I attended during the mid thirties.

We had a forty-six man squad this year. We will miss the twelve seniors, but as thirty-four are returning we should have another fairly successful season next year.

IT'S ONLY GOOD SENSE TO BE GOOD NEIGHBORS

President Abraham Lincoln once said, "Just as I would not be a slave, so I must not be a master. This is the essence of democracy."

His immortal words simply declared his belief in the Golden Rule.

A company, in order to be successful, must live in a community of good friends and neighbors. To achieve this, the company must itself be a good friend and neighbor. This, too, is the Golden Rule in action — and it is the essence of democracy.
